

THE WHITE FURROW

"Say, uncle, do you see that little string of a fellow a few rods ahead of us? He has a furrow of snow-white hair that ran straight back from the middle of his forehead to the base of his skull."

"I noticed him," Fred's uncle replied slowly. But never refer to any one by the slang name of shrimp, my lad, just because he is small. The small man is not responsible for his stature any more than you are for yours, and you do not know the bluntness of the heart that his undersized body may inclose."

"You know the insurance exchange building down on Third avenue? It is twenty stories high, and was probably the first of the skyscrapers to be erected about fifteen or twenty years ago. Although it is hardly within that class now, in those days people pointed it out as about the highest thing that could possibly be built."

"Up to the nineteenth story the framework was riveted together."

Every beam had been bolted by engine and cable. The riveters were right at the heads of the erections, and Douglas McLean, the man you just now called a shrimp, was at the very top of that network of fabricated steel. With his forge he hoisted

With his forge he heated the rivets white hot and tossed them down with rifle-like precision into the bucket a boy held where the riveters were at work.

"As you just remarked in your slangy way, McLean is a small man, but he is a genuine Scot and has all the characteristics of his race. He was always at least a story above the riveters; and to see him send the red hot rivets sailing through the air in the dusk to land with a thud in the bucket was a sight to remember. Before the man with the riveting machine had completed his work Mac always had another hot clutcher to send on its way."

"The boy with the bucket was a man in bulk; indeed he was much larger than McLean, and nothing pleased him more than to tease the wiry Scotchman about his size and to suggest that he must feel insignificant among such a large number of big, able bodied men, McLean, who was a quiet man, said little in reply, but if his forehead had caught the gleam that sometimes shone in his eyes he would have taken warning and stopped his foolishness."

"Once at least the lad's companions had warned him to watch the Scot."

"Some day," they said, "they'll pick you up from down there with a shovel and after a twenty story drop to a brick pavement, a fellow is hardly in shape to ask whether he slipped or stumbled. Better be careful; or better still, stop that ragging; besides, Scotty never did anything to you; so why torment him all the time? He may surprise you some day and really should not blame him if he did touch you up a bit, for you certainly have it coming."

"For a little while things went on much as usual, and the boy and McLean had no particular trouble. Then one afternoon the Scot missed the bucket three times running and he accused the boy of moving the bucket. He became so angry at the boy that he threatened to spot the next one in his face. The young fellow knew that he could do it too, for McLean was almost as accurate as a rifle with those hot bits of metal."

"For about an hour all went well. Then McLean missed again, and the superintendent came up and in no gentle words warned him to be more careful. Now could not work's down there with red-hot rivets falling all around them. Of course McLean blamed the boy, and the boy denied he was to blame. Then the superintendent reproached the Scotchman again. McLean was furious, and when the superintendent had gone he shook his small fist at the boy and threatened him with almost everything if he missed one more rivet. "I'll throw ye off here if it is the last thing I ever do!" he raged.

"Humph! Throw me off?" replied the lad, who was every bit as angry as the Scotchman. "Those pipistem arms couldn't throw a cat on the theatre roof down here!"

"Well, see! You see!" screamed the other. "And if I do, it will not be you that will be after offering any testimony at the inquest!"

And the view from the top of that spider web framework was either magnificent or terrifying according to the way in which you looked. If you gazed off at the surrounding country the view was glorious, but if you looked down the side of the building the sight was enough to unnerve any man.

"As the building was riveted in sections, riveters followed and put in the temporary floors; but although the ladders were safe enough all materials had still to be hoisted from the outside. The work was now well on its way, and the boys were growing more cautious with each added story of height—all except McLean. His head was as clear as his foot as he confided as he was on the platform, and no matter how the wind blew or how hot the sun shone, he would trust himself from beam to beam with the sure-footedness of a mountain goat."

"The boys came out all right, preparing to return, to work the hoisting engine began its wheezy puffing, and a long girder slowly travelled upward. The boy, who was sitting on the edge of the story near the top, watched the great long beam, fascinated. He had watched hundreds of them blotted just like this one, but somehow that girder seemed different from others and held his attention."

"Up and up it came, while the engine puffed laboriously. Then as it came almost opposite him he saw that the clamps were not fitting as tight as they should be and that they had already let the beam slip a little. "If that ever slips and falls" he said to himself, as he watched the girder trail "it will be gooning to that buck down there, and did in the engine house will be crushed like an egg shell."

"He could not stop it. No one would pay any attention to any signals except those that the boss erec-tor made, and he had not yet returned from lunch. The only thing that the lad could do was to sit helpless and hope against hope that it would come out all right."

"Just as he thought that all was going to end well and that he had his worry for his pains, the hoisting cable on the sheave above caught in some way, and the girder swung round quickly and struck the building, a resounding crash. The lad heard for blocks and that brought scores of people to the spot. Unmindful of the danger, they insisted on crowding round the engine house to see what was the trouble."

As the girder rebounded the clamps allowed the beam to slip still more until it tipped at an angle of forty-five degrees. The rebound had thrown it away from the building and as it came back the lower end brushed the lad from his seat.

"It all happened so quickly that the lad could not dodge and the girder would have whirled him off the building as easily as you would push a fly from a wall had he not thrown both his arms and legs around it and hung on to the grim death. The girder had a short, right angled projection, a few feet from the lower end and as the boy's weight tipped the beam farther and farther from the horizontal he slipped slowly downward until he lodged on the cross piece."

"When his first fright was gone, the boy, not yet realising how narrow his escape from death had been, became overconfident, and, looking up at the Scot who had rushed to the edge of the building, called out 'Say, shrimp, old top, have the boss give them a let me down, will you? This is not the softest seat in the world. Hurry now—' He stopped short, for the beam had slipped again; in a frenzy he looked at the clamps. Yes, the beam had slipped more! The top of the beam had no projecting piece. The clamps continued to slip, both the boy and the beam would shoot off into space and down down to the street—so far below that the people there looked like pigmies and the automobiles like coasters wagons. To make matters worse the cable had caught again, and his father was jerking it and rebolting it in an effort to get it loose; and at every jerk the clamps slipped another inch."

"At a glance the Scot had seen the whole trouble and the probable outcome of it. Hastily picking up a few bolts, he kicked off his shoes and ran out to the end of the beam that supported the hoisting tackle. Swinging over the side as confidently as if he had been ten feet higher of two hundred feet from the pavement, he carefully slid down the steel cable and let a trail of blood where the sharp points of the frayed strand cut into his hands."

"The cable was swaying to and fro in such a way as to make his descent doubly dangerous, but he never faltered. Near the end of the beam that was close to the cable he stopped to slip a couple of bolts into the holes there."

"Now, now, lad," he said, "just keep your nerve. There will be nothing but a clump from slipping off entirely and I am going to slide down and see if I can't get some into those holes just above the clamps there; so sh-won't slip a single bit more. If it gets any straighter up and down, you are going to have a job to hold on."

"This wiry blackhead slid as down to the clamps and got his bolts placed but he could not reach the boy, who was beginning to give way to fear and nervousness, and whose strength was fast failing. By stretching as far as he possibly could, McLean could barely touch the boy's extended finger tips and all efforts to reach the boy's extended hands and hold him to a safer spot altogether were futile."

"It was during one of these periods of straining that the clamps slipped, sending the girder again until they struck against the Scot's last set of bolts with a whang that made the cable hum like a gigantic violin string. For him to reach the boy was now clearly impossible not only because of the increased distance but, because the blacksmith's trouser leg had been caught between the clamps and the bolts, and as he might he could not reach the tough knot, and as he had no knife and could not cut it away."

"Far far below them the ever increasing crowd was shouting, but what they were saying McLean could not hear, neither did he particularly care, for his eyes and his mind were on the boy a few feet below him. He had forgotten the taunts and the insults the boy had flung at his face, for against everything, even his own throat, against the life that he was now risking his own to save."

"The boy's face was becoming sadder his fingers were cramping; the look of death was on his face. The Scot knew that if help did not come to the boy in the next minute or so he would drop like a plummet."

"The boys had gathered at a large window that opened directly opposite the two men and were shouting encouragement first to one and then the other. Since the hugo to beam was only a few feet from the edge, they made a human chain by grasping one another round the waist, with the outside man leaning far out over the edge. But they could not quite reach the unfortunate boy."

"McLean saw that those men were powerless and knew that he alone could save the lad. Locking his ankles round the beam above the clamps, he threw himself slowly until his head hung downward with his back to the beam. Coin, watch and keys slipped from his pockets and went tinkling to the pavement."

"In that position he could just catch the boy by the wrists, but when he tried to hoist him he found that his own strength was now too far spent for a straight lift and the boy was too weak and faint to help himself. A second later the Scot felt the boy's hold relax; he had become unconscious and had slipped downward off the crosspiece."

"The sudden jerk the boy's weight gave the blacksmith's arms seemed almost to pull them from their sockets; the man bit his lips until the blood started. Though he could not see the pavement, in his mind he knew just how far it was down there, and from the noise he knew that the crowd must be a large one."

"The cords in arms stood out like great blue knots, and the veins seemed as if they were about to burst; but with each paroxysm of pain that came with the slightest exertion he gripped the steel bander. Then he began to swing the lad to and fro like a pendulum. The men at the window at once understood his plan and again formed the chain."

"Every swing came on inch nearer the window, and the men waiting there began to wonder just how long the blacksmith's blood covered hands could keep their grip upon the boy's twenty wrists. The Scot's eyes were fairly popping from his head and his face was a livid purple. It must end soon."

"One more swing, and the outside man gave a yell that told he had the boy by the ankles. Then those behind him dragged the two back over the edge to safety. The lad had received a scalp wound where his head had struck the crosspiece on the beam but otherwise he seemed unhurt, while the rest attended to McLean, whose position was even more precarious than before, for he was hanging head downward and had grown too weak to raise himself. Moreover, when the weight of the boy had been removed from the beam it had swung upward and round hitting against the tail round cable, which rubbed against McLean's forehead and peeled off a strip of skin from there to the back of his skull. When the hair grew in again it was snow white, and, when he parts it in the middle, it does look like a white furrow, but, instead of being an oddity, it is a badge of honor.

"It! but there was a lot of cheering among you fellows when he reached the ground."

"Well, I really cannot say from personal knowledge, for I do not know." He removed his hat and, putting his hair, disclosed an ugly scar. "You see, it was the fellow that Douglas McLean swung to the window."

Nearly The Same Here.

Broer Horton, of the Vegreville Observer, hits the nail squarely on the head when he says:

"Eaton's catalogues for spring and summer, 1922, are commencing to arrive. Their arrival coincides with the disappearance from the columns of the Observer of the advertising of most local firms with whose goods the Eaton Co. comes in direct competition. In other words, while the Eaton Co. prosecutes its business on the continent energetically in all lines that in good, the local firms most interested cease from publicity, and confine their attention to belly-aching about hard times. Is it any wonder that the freight shed, the express office and the mills are continually jammed with shipments from the T. Eaton Co. to people of this town and district? Nothing else could be expected. And moreover, no blame can be attached to those who buy from Eaton; far from it, for they are paying a direct tribute to the value of good advertising. It is customary for local newspapers to boost for local firms. The Observer believes firmly in the trade as home principle. But just why we should worry about business for firms which have not nerve enough to fend for themselves and, who, moreover, obtain the most of their printed matter away from Vegreville, is something we leave them to figure out for themselves. No complaint here on our part, gentlemen; just a few little statements of fact."

OUTLOOK IN DAIRYING IS VERY BRIGHT

The butter market has strengthened slightly during the past week and the present outlook in the dairy business is much brighter than it has been for some time. Another shipment of 14,000 boxes of butter arrived at the coast this week, but with the butter market in Great Britain considerably stronger it is expected that this will be the last shipment. New Zealand butter for delivery March 17 is quoted at 46 per pound higher than the present price. This advance in price is the direct result of the strengthening of the British market and with an outlet elsewhere it is not likely that New Zealand butter will be shipped to the coast where it will have to compete with Alberta butter.

Cream production at the present time is nearly 150 per cent higher than at the same time last year, and as a result by the time the present shipment of New Zealand butter has been used up Alberta creamerymen will be in a position to step in and supply the market. Although cream production is much higher than usual at this time of the year, creamerymen are of the opinion that there is not likely to be another drop in cream prices for some time.

At the present time creameries are quoting 28c per pound butter fat for special cream, 25c for No. 1, and 22c for No. 2, f.o.b. shipping points. Creamery butter is retailing at 35c for No. 1 and 30c for No. 2.

Dairying on The Prairies

It has been said that an agricultural country can never reach its maximum stage of development until its farmers engage extensively in dairying. This principle is now universally recognized, and the countries following the best farming methods have their products the highest per capita output of milk, butter and cheese.

Western Canada has proved many times over that she can produce the best hard wheat in the world, and she is convincing her neighbors that she can send them butter of just as fine a quality as her grain. Her farmers are gradually being persuaded to market their foders and other crops in the form of livestock and dairy products, and practical demonstration is proving this. During the past year phenomenal growth in the number of dairy cows and a wonderful improvement in the quality of dairy products has been witnessed in the Canadian West. As the present rate of progress, the permanent agriculture of the western provinces will in a few years more, be devoted largely to intelligent dairy farming, with its products commensurate the same as "No. 1 Canadian Hard" does.

Before this can be accomplished, however, it is recognized that western Canada must produce better and of a quality that will enable her to compete in the world's markets with such countries as Denmark, where the science of marketing dairy products has been reduced to a fine art. To do this successfully, the basic product—cream—must not only be of a high quality, but the finished article for export must be of a uniform grade adapted to the palates of the people in the countries where it is sent. This is the problem that is now occupying the attention of dairy experts in all three provinces of western Canada but also in the United States and Europe.

It was not until 1915 that even Manitoba, though the oldest province of the prairies, commenced to produce enough butter to export. In 1915, however, that province sent out 153 carloads, and during the first few months of 1920, 17 carloads of creamery butter were shipped to Chicago and New York, and to Philadelphia and two to Nova Scotia, besides a number of carloads to eastern Canada and the Pacific coast. Saskatchewan is following closely her sister provinces in the dairy business. In 1919, she shipped 31 carloads of 1920, 43 went to Eastern Canada, and seven to points in the United States. From a production of just over two million pounds of creamery butter in 1919, she has an annual output of more than twelve million pounds of creamery butter, which is increasing steadily every year. A large proportion of this is the direct result of the strengthening of the British market and with an outlet elsewhere it is not likely that New Zealand butter will be shipped to the coast where it will have to compete with Alberta butter.

In 1919, Alberta produced 3,215,000 pounds of butter, Saskatchewan 1,345,596 pounds, Manitoba 2,355,187 pounds—a total of just over six million pounds. In 1920, ten years later, the production of these three provinces had increased from this total to 52,375,000 pounds. The total value of dairy products was more than $74,000,000.

In spite of such progress, however, the dairy industry is only in its infancy in the prairie provinces, and there is much to be accomplished before these provinces can hope to reach the top height of their production. What has been done is only an indication of what can be accomplished. Western Canada's most pressing need is more farmers and more stock. To these she offers a great opportunity. For the dairymen she has cheap land, and for the stock raiser she has excellent foders, a suitable climate and excellent marketing facilities, ensuring cheap production and a good price for the finished product. With these advantages and a more closely settled population there is no reason why Western Canada should not take her place among the dairy countries of the world.

THE SPEECH FROM THE THRONE

The following is the speech from the throne, as read by His Honor Lieutenant Governor Dwyer, at the opening of the Alberta legislature on Thursday of last week:

"My Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly:
I have the honor to be present at the opening of the First Session of the Fifth Legislative Assembly."

"Since the close of the last session His Grace the Duke of Devonshire has concluded a tour of service as Governor General of Canada which will be remembered with deep appreciation. He has been succeeded by Baron Byng of Vimy as His Majesty's representative. It is with great satisfaction that we welcome him and we believe that the services he will render will be of the same high order as those which endeared him to our people as Commander of the Canadian troops at the Front."

"In common with many other parts of Canada and the world, Alberta has suffered the general economic and industrial depression following the war but present indications give hope of a gradual recovery. This depression has resulted in extensive unemployment. My Government has taken full cognizance of these conditions and has instituted measures to meet immediate necessities, at the same time considering a more satisfactory method of dealing with the problem. Legislation will be introduced to create a Bureau of Labor in order that the problems concerning the wage earners throughout the province may receive that consideration to which they are entitled.

"The conditions existing in certain sections of the Southern part of the province, consequent upon failure of crops and general depression in markets and the financial conditions created by a series of poor crop seasons, have received the attention of the government. Necessary measures for the immediate relief of the residents of these sections have been undertaken, and with the hope of arriving at a permanent solution of this problem, my Government appointed the Southern Alberta Survey Board. The report of the Board, the outstanding feature of which is faith and confidence in the future of the area under investigation will shortly be placed before me."

"My government fully appreciates the necessity for strict economy and careful administration in order to maintain the unimpaired credit of the province, but with faith in the future of the province it is felt that a sound development policy is necessary. To this end, legislation will be introduced to you providing for a public highway system. You will also be asked to provide for railway and telephone extension."

"Barren attention is being given to the marketing of farm products, and steps are being considered for the creation of increased facilities in this respect."

"Believing that any improvement in the general economic condition of the province is dependent upon a substantial reduction of the freight rates, my Government will cooperate with the governments of the other western provinces in pressing for a reduction of rates on farm products. A freight rate expert has been engaged to make a survey of rates as they affect the consumer, the marketing of agricultural products, and the proper adjustment of the amount and other resources of the province."

"The question of the return of the Natural Resources has been the subject of a conference between my advisers and the Minister of the Interior. My government will continue to urge upon the Dominion government the necessity for the immediate transfer."

"It is most gratifying to observe in every element of the community the growing sense of the importance of Education. This is shown by the increased attendance at the University and the High Schools of the Province and by the fact that the number of rural schools in which grades higher than the eighth are being taught has gradually increased during the past year. It will be the policy of the government to foster and to assist as far as possible in providing the means of meeting the most commendable desire for education."

"The question of Public Health will receive the earnest consideration of my Government, not only from the preventive but also from the curative standpoint. Child Welfare Clinics and Public School inspections will be increased, and further Municipal Hospital Districts organized."

"You will be asked to consider legislation dealing with certain important amendments to existing Statutes. The annual reports of the various Departments of the Government will be presented to the house in due course."

"The Public Accounts for the last Fiscal Year will be placed before you and the Estimates of Expenditure for the current fiscal year will be submitted for your inspection."

"I now leave you to these and any matters that may be submitted to you, with confidence that the public interest will at all times be advanced and fully safeguarded."

In order to further promote the agricultural interests of the province the Manitoba government has decided to increase loan advanced under the National Credits scheme. The limit now placed by the act, $3,000,000 will probably be increased to $5,000,000. Hon. Edward Brown, provincial treasurer, has announced. The policy of encouraging farmers to engage more extensively in stock raising by supplying well bred dairy cattle on credit will also be enlarged and new tax proposals that will benefit the farmers are under consideration."

LEGISLATURE IS IN SESSION

The opening of the new legislature took place on Thursday afternoon of last week, in the presence of the largest and probably the most democratic crowd that ever attended such a function. The election of a speaker was featured by a rather unusual occurrence, after Premier Greenfield had moved the nomination of O. L. McPherson for this position. Also Honors of Cushing, placed General J. S. Stewart of Lethbridge, in the nomination. General Stewart is the only Conservative member in the house. This is the first instance in which a second nomination for the speakership, in opposition of the government's selection has been made in the Alberta legislature. Had a division occurred, it would have established a precedent, but General Stewart withdrew, and Mr. McPherson, who represents Little Bow, was elected by acclamation. He made the usual speech of thanks.

Lieut. Governor Dwyer then formally opened the session with the speech from the throne. The speech expressed confidence in the ultimate return to normal conditions in the province, referred to action taken by the government to deal with the economic situation, with respect not only to temporary relief, but also to a permanent solution, made reference to the survey board of southern Alberta, and also forecasted legislation with respect to the highways commission, establishment of government labor bureau branch, to improve wage conditions in the province, and other legislation with respect to public health and education.

The house resumed on Friday afternoon, when Donald Cameron, member for Innisfail, and J. R. Love, member for Walworth, the youngest member in the house, moved the reply to the speech from the throne. Both men made a favorable impression on the occasion of their first speeches in the new legislature. Mr. Cameron referred to his district, Innisfail, as one which never had a crop failure. He referred briefly to the local economy, the house on his choice of a speaker, and urged the members to give him co-operation. He closed by doing to employment, and regretted the extent of this, in view of the existence of such potential wealth in Alberta. He urged the importance of maintaining the optimum financial credit of the province, and was glad to see the government dealing with the question of marketing and freight rates. He urged further action on the natural resources question and suggested the minister of agriculture on securing a book on this subject, one which should be put into the hands of every voter. Referring to education, Mr. Cameron said that he believed 25 per cent of the trustees in Alberta, were a greater hindrance to education than a help, but that the other 75 per cent were giving fairly good service. Mr. Cameron had agreed with Premier Greenfield that settlers now in and counted before much immigration was encouraged.

J. R. Love made an eloquent address, dwelling particularly on the urgent need of the province getting its natural resources. He said the legislature would feel the loss of the presence of Hon. Chas. Stewart, but felt that Mr. Stewart could give fine service in his wider field, and that he was of great assistance in helping the province to get its resources. He referred to the great resources of the country, particularly the undeveloped resources of the north country. Speaking of the highways commission, he hoped that all phases of patronage would be eliminated from the road building program, and that the government would have competent advice in this matter.

Also, of continuing to keep the educational system on its present high plane in the province, and that the moral and physical development of the children should not be overlooked. He referred to the need of high schools in the rural parts, and urged that the educational tax system should be put on a provincial basis.

The house adjourned until Monday afternoon, February 6th, when J. H. Boyle, leader of the opposition, took up the debate.

MRS. PENNINGTON
New Westminster, B.C.

"In 1910, I was taken with Bronchial Asthma and no one knows what I suffered with it during the winter. I began having Choking Spells—gasping for breath and could not speak. I would have one of these bad spells in the evening, one during the night, and one in the morning. The doctor said he could do nothing for me. "In the spring of 1920, I started taking 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a few days, the choking spells stopped, and I have had none since May 7th, 1920. I have so wanted to tell other sufferers who have the same trouble about 'Fruit-a-tives' for I know how they must suffer. Some thought the Asthma would come back on me as winter came on but it has not, thanks to 'Fruit-a-tives'. Mrs. J. M. PENNINGTON, 506a box, 6 for $2.00, trial size 25c. At dealers or sent postpaid by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa."

Oil boring operations will be started on the Vermilion river, 30 miles north of Irma, Alta., for a Calgary syndicate.

COMMUNICATION

(We do not necessarily endorse the sentiments advanced by this or any other correspondent under this heading—224.)

Editor Times,
Dear Sir:

As the convention of the Alberta
Fairs is shortly to take place and certain matters are to be brought up at the convention in reference to the different agricultural societies, possibly a suggestion may be in order. A gentleman writing the Journal from Owenay suggests the government should meet all fairs on as he calls it a fifty-fifty arrangement, that of the local society to furnish a certain amount, and the government to furnish a like amount.

Last year the government furnished to the different Alberta Fairs the sum of one hundred and thirty-two thousand dollars ($132,000.00) or in other words over sixty per cent of the prize money that was awarded to all fairs on the A. and B. Districts.

This is a very large sum and should be appreciated by the different fairs that received their quota. But how many of these fairs made a success?
It is a well known fact that of the fairs the magnificent percentage of 95 went in the hole, and were not a financial success. Why?

Might I suggest that if the government gave a bonus of say 25 per cent of the amount subscribed locally, the amount to be paid after the fair is over, and to be applied on the prize money, it will give the local communities something to work for instead of forgetting the business end of the fair and leaving it to the government to foot the bill. If the government still wants to give that sixty per cent, why not give 25 per cent to the local Agricultural society and the balance of 35 per cent to the local district to be applied on making better roads?

There is no trouble in making a fair
a success if everybody gives their help and co-operation. The general thing that happens are, that a few get together and work their heads off to make the fair a success, and the balance strut around on the fair day and criticize. No fair will be a success unless the whole community do their utmost to help.

Milliet has for the last five years held a fair. This fair is purely a community organization. Milliet has recognition of will be the standing conditions of the Court.

Further particulars can be obtained from Messrs. Leggie & Manly, We-taskiwin, Alberta, Solicitors for the Plaintiffs.

J. I. POOLIE,
47-2tn Clerk of the Court fairs of Alberta will help a lot, and save the government a bunch of good money.

Trusting that I have not taken up too much of your valuable space,
Yours truly,
A. P. Mitchell.

EMMELT'S
VERNO
MEDICAL COMPOUND

Edmonton, January 16th, 1920
Edmonton.

Just a few lines in appreciation of the benefit I have received from using Vernol. I have suffered with rheumatism for about ten years, was gradually getting worse until I was scarcely able to get up out of a chair and my work was almost impossible. After taking two boxes I was entirely cured and can be seen every day driving the East end delivery car, delivering laundry to my many customers who could also give evidence as to my condition,
both before and after taking Vernol.

Frank Kramer
Owner and Mgr of East End Bakery
Phone 5565, 10301 96 St. Edm.

If you have Rheumatism, take Vernol and stay with it.

TOWN TOPICS

The weather turned decidedly cold a few days ago.

Mrs. McCormick of Sheldon's store, spent the week-end in Edmonton.

Criminal sittings of the supreme court will commence here on Monday, February 13th.

Joe Schreffels, who is leaving the town, has moved his effects into the home at the corner of Thelus and Beattie streets.

The Keesom Bridge Club met at the home of treasurer on Monday evening. A very enjoyable evening was spent.

James Hladik has arrived from Wetaskiwin, Alberta, for a sojourn of a month. Mr. Hladik is delighted with Tampa Tribune.

The friends of Mrs. Frank Lucas, who had the misfortune to fall down cellar some time ago, are glad to learn she is making progress towards recovery.

J. E. Fraser, the city's genial secretary treasurer, has sufficiently recovered from his recent illness as to be able to resume his duties at the city office.

One of the best dances of the season will be given in the Angus hall on Friday evening, February 24th, under the auspices of the Wetaskiwin Curling Club.

Two rinks of Wetaskiwin curlers, skipped by P. A. Miquelon and O. Torgeson, went to Chamros Saturday evening and brought back with them the Whyte & Orr trophy.

The Girl's Institute Club will meet at the home of Mrs. H. J. Montgomery on Friday, February 10 at 7:30 o'clock. Any one wishing to become members will be welcome.

A. Welstorf, of the Knob Hill district, passed through the city a few days ago on his way to Windsor, B.C. where he expects to reside for some time.

Boys and girls, do not forget that you will receive a free valentine if you buy home-made candy at the Altar Society sale to be held at Murray's ice cream parlor on Saturday afternoon, February 18.

A. Deligian, who has been connected with the Star Store for some time, has accepted a position in Edmonton, and left last week to assume his new duties. He will be missed particularly in hockey and baseball circles.

A rink of Wetaskiwin curlers, composed of Geo. Graham, R. S. Murray, O. Torgeson, and E. Morrice, went to Red Deer on Tuesday morning to compete in the bonspiel being held there this week-end.

D. MacEachern was at Edmonton last week attending the convention of school trustees as a representative from the school board here. He was one of the delegates to interview the government on school matters.

Everyone who makes a purchase at the tea and sale of food and home-made candy to be held by the Altar Society at Mr. Murray's ice cream parlor, on Saturday, February 18th, from three to six o'clock, will receive a free valentine.

The Rebeahs and Odd Fellows held a most enjoyable social evening on Friday night last in their hall. Cards were played until nearly midnight, when lunch was served. This was followed by a dance.

V. C. French leaves on Saturday of this week for Toronto, Ont., on business connected with the Canadian Weekly Newspaper Association, of which he is president. He will be absent a couple of weeks.

E. E. Sparks, the member for Wetaskiwin, will be a very busy man at this session of the legislature. He is chairman of the agricultural committee, as well as being a member of the public accounts and municipal law committees.

A. S. Rosewell and family expect to leave in a few days for Chill, where they will make their future home. Mr. Rosewell recently sold his farm and equipment just west of the city to Mr. Alex. Mahlein, a gentleman from Switzerland, at a good figure.

The Methodist W.M.S. and Mission Band will hold a tea and bazaar in the ice cream parlors of the city bakery on Saturday of this week, February 11, in connection with the bazaar. Home-made cooking will be offered for sale.

The ladies of the Hospital Aid Society are holding a dance in Angus Hall on Friday evening, February 11, the proceeds of which will go to the hospital. Music will be furnished by an excellent four piece orchestra. Be sure and attend and help this worthy object.

Miss Morrice, former principal of the King Edward school, but recently of the Edmonton teaching staff, came down on Tuesday to visit relatives in the city. We understand she has resigned to take up a better position, the happy event taking place the latter part of this month.

Gifts That Last

The gift worth while is the gift that lives down through the years, that may be passed on to your children, and on to their children.

SILVER AND GOLD and precious stones do not change as the years go by, except to grow dearer in sentimental value. We have gifts that last at prices that are reasonable.
